Corporate Angel Network Flights Set Record in July

White Plains, NY -- The organization that transports cancer patients to treatment in the empty seats of corporate jets arranged to carry 307 patients to treatment in July. This is largest number of monthly flights in its nearly 30-year history.

Corporate Angel Network has arranged for almost 35,000 flights since its founding in 1981, working with physicians, corporate flight departments, and leading treatment centers to coordinate patient travel needs with the scheduled flight activity of participating corporations.

“This record reflects the increasing support of business aviation for the work that we do,” said Peter Fleiss, Executive Director. “Many patients just wouldn’t be able to access needed specialized treatment without it. They either have immune deficiencies that prevent commercial airline travel, don’t have the financial resources, or in many cases, both. Corporate Angel Network is an excellent example of American business using their resources in a unique way to support cancer patients.”

The charity has received numerous awards in recognition of its service to cancer patients including The Volunteer Action Award, the highest volunteer award from the President of the United States.
